I tried to buy some Series E savings bonds at the local banks this week. The clerk asked me if they were for use in a chain letter, and when I told her they were, she wouldn't sell them to me. What gives?

It is illegal to use savings bonds in a chain letter, and as agents of the Treasury Department with regard to bonds, banks cannot sell bonds for that use, according to Chester Sprinkle, president of State National Bank.

After receiving numerous requests for the Series E bonds, Sprinkle said his staff began asking buyers if they intended to use the bonds in a chain letter and found that that, indeed, seemed to be the reason for the sudden interest in that series bond.

A chapter titled "Chain Letter Schemes" in the "United States Savings Bond Service Manual" instructs banks not to issue bonds if the buyer states or the clerk has reason to assume the bonds will be used illegally, Sprinkle explained.

"The issuing agents of U.S. Savings bonds (the banks) have been authorized and requested to reject applications for bonds where it is known or suspected that the bonds will be used illegally," the government manual instructs bankers.

"The Treasury Department has asked that we not issue bonds for that purpose," Sprinkle noted, "and that's enough instruction for me in the matter."

Sprinkle said he has talked with officials from the city's other two banks and learned that they, too, are following procedures as outlined by the Treasury Department through the Federal Reserve Bank.

Should someone be prosecuted for using the bonds in such a manner, Sprinkle was told by District Atty. Pat Batchelor, they could face a penalty of between $1 and $1,000 and a jail sentence of as much as six months.

"Some people have been upset because they haven't been able to buy the bonds," he noted. "I guess they don't want to break the chain. But it will be broken by somebody; they always are."

There's a lot of cheap exercise devices, medicines, and other gimmicks being advertised these days which claims to give you a body beautiful in six days, two weeks, etc. Are those companies bound by those promises? Are their products tested by the government before they can make such claims?

The Federal Food and Drug Administration warns you to beware of such products and devices.

"Often, the only thing these devices will help you lose is your money," an FDA spokesman said.

Although the promoters of these "miracle products" claim they can take off weights and develop the bust, among other things, the FDA man said, the results they produce are questionable and some of the products may even be hazardous to your health.

Advertising in this country isn't censored; so long as a manufacturer doesn't libel another product and can produce some type of documentation of his often-generalized claims, and so long as he doesn't actually guarantee that you will lose that amount of weight, the government has little say about such ads. Intentional deception is difficult to prove in such cases.

The FDA had specific warnings about some of the gimmicks. For example, wrapping your body with soaked cloths and putting on a plastic suit to lose weight is a gimmick that is not only ridiculous but dangerous, the FDA said.

You could become overheated and dehydrated from excessive perspiration, and the problem is especially risky for overweight people with cardiac or circulatory problems.

"Those other wonder machines, amazing creams and fancy devices that give you the empty promise of instant beauty are a myth," the FDA advised, "So save your money."

There is a vacant lot in Bardwell being used to stack junk cars, farm implements, old refrigerators, and similar items. Is there a law requiring the owner to clean up the lot or at least construct a privacy fence to conceal it from public view? If so, who needs to be contacted to enforce this law?

So far as Action Line has been able to determine, unless that lot is adjacent to an interstate highway there is no federal or state law requiring that the lot be cleaned up.

John Raines of the State Attorney General's office in Austin said he knew of no such law in Texas.

"I am not aware of such a law," Raines said. "I'm not saying there isn't one, but if there is it is almost never used."

Asst. District Atty. David Ralston said that he was also unfamiliar with such a law if it exists, and said that the majority of such cases are taken care of by city ordinance.

If the lot in question borders on or is primary to an interstate highway, and if the property is not zoned "Industrial" by local government, then the Federal Highway Department can force the owner to clear the lot according to the Federal Highway Beautification Act, that agency said.

Ralston said that about the only way for you to get the lot cleared is for you to file civil suit against the property owner if you feel you can prove the lot is a public nuisance.

"If the junk is so bad that it causes a public nuisance," Ralston said, "and if you can prove that in a court of law, then you could force the owner to clear the lot."

Ralston said such proof in court is often difficult, since the burden of proof is on the person filing suit.

But, he said, as far as any governmental agency stepping in on your behalf and forcing the lot to be cleared, he knew of no law or agency with authority to do that.

'69 redistricting said a 'racial gerrymander'

By SUSAN LEITNER
Sun Staff Writer

DALLAS — The class action suit trying to force the redistricting of Navarro County Commissioner's precincts moved into its second day here Wednesday after Tuesday's testimony wavered between the plaintiffs trying to prove the 1969 redistricting plan created a racial gerrymander and the defense trying to paint a picture of county commissioner's responsiveness to the needs of the black community in Navarro County.

The suit began in Sarah T. Hughes' U.S. District Court at 10:15 a.m. after the attorney for both parties met in the judge's chambers for 45 minutes.

Larry Daves, attorney for the plaintiffs, James Lister, Robert M. Scott, Foley Wynn, Mrs. Irene Burks and the Rev. Larry L. Polk Sr., called the 1969 redistricting of the county a "racial gerrymander". He said that the redistricting in 1969 split the black vote, which is predominately in the southeast part of Corsicana, into three precincts.

THE NAVARRO County Commissioner's Court redistricted the county precincts in 1969 to comply with a U.S. Supreme Court ruling which stated that counties were under the one man-one vote rule. The precinct lines before 1969 had 71 per cent of the population of Navarro County in Precinct One, Arlon Simmons, former county commissioner, testified.

In the redistricting, however, the black vote in Navarro County was split into three precincts — Precincts One, Two and Three. The plaintiffs contend that this dilutes the black vote and makes it impossible for a black to be elected county commissioner.

Foley Wynn, the first witness for the plaintiffs, told the court that he had been appointed to a redistricting committee which the commissioners court formed at that time.

He said that he was appointed to the committee only after an outcry arose because there was no black member. He said there were six members of the committee and he was the only black member.

Wynn said that the committee presented the commissioners court with six redistricting plans, but the court turned down each plan. Wynn said the chairman and the members of the committee resigned in disgust.

WYNN SAID that the only objection he remembered the commissioners raising to the six submitted plans was the disproportionate mileage of roads and bridges between the precincts.

He also testified that any of the six plans presented by the committee would have recognized the integrity of the black community.

Later, when put on the witness stand, Simmons told the court that the six plans were refused by the court because they had boundaries which did not follow permanent boundaries such as highways and creeks, and these plans would have cost the taxpayers large amounts of money for engineers to be called in when there was a boundary dispute. He also said that some of the plans were turned down because they did not equalize the mileage of roads and footage of bridges in each precinct.

During his cross-examination of Wynn, Earl Luna, attorney for the county pointed out two black men who had won city commission and school board elections.

Wynn said that a black could only be voted into an elected position if the blacks and whites wanted him in. Luna then asked Wynn if "Nobody is elected unless the majority wants him." Wynn answered that was true.

"Then a majority of the voters must want him to win," Luna asked.

"YES, AND THE whites hold the majority," Wynn replied.

Luna then asked if Wynn was saying that the electorate shouldn't decide who wins the election. Wynn said no, the electorate should decide.

Daves pointed out during his examination of Wynn that the school board and city commissioner's races were races in which a plurality, not a majority vote, won the election. He also pointed out that the elections were not countywide nor involved county government positions.

Luna pointed to the elections as a dispute to Wynn's claim that it was impossible for a black to win an election as county commissioner.

Luna asked Wynn if roads were a main concern of the black community as mentioned by Wynn and Lister in the list of questions concerning complaints of the black community. Wynn said yes.

Luna then asked Wynn questions concerning several towns in Navarro County, all of which Wynn agreed had an all black or predominantly black population.

LUNA ASKED Wynn if he was familiar with each town he named and if the town had a specifically named hard-topped road running through it and if each town had gravel roads connecting every house in the town to the hard-topped road.

Naming off each town in turn, Elm Flat, Chatfield, Pelham, Samaria, Timothy, Round Prairie and Goodlow Park he asked Wynn if each town had gravel roads. Wynn said that in reference to Elm Flat, Goodlow Park, Chatfield, and Samaria there are not gravel roads to every house in the town. He said in Pelham it was true that the roads were gravel.

In response to Luna's statement that the hard-topped roads running through each town showed the commissioners court was responsive to the needs of the black community Wynn said "I have to say yes."

Wynn said that the roads have not been gravelled for several months or even several years.

Luna then enumerated county services available to black and white citizens of the county which are supported by county funds. He mentioned Navarro County Legal Services, the Family Consultation Service, the Community Services program, the Corsicana Public Library, Memorial Hospital, the City-County Health Department, county fire protection (which Wynn classified as not very good), the Home Demonstration Agent and the Agricultural Agent as ways in which the county has been responsive to the needs of the community, particularly the black community. Luna asked after each service mentioned if the service was useful to the black community and in every instance Wynn replied that it was.

DAVES ASKED Wynn if there were any sewage facilities or garbage pick-up service in the small communities mentioned. Wynn said there were not, to his knowledge.

Simmons then took the stand and testified that when he left office in 1974 all of the mentioned towns had gravel roads making every home accessible to a paved road. He also testified that, in almost every case, that there was no appreciable building of new houses which were not on gravel roads.

Commission splits in naming Armistead new mayor pro tem

BY GARY EDMONDSON
City Editor

Newly elected City Commissioner Gene Johnson wasted no time in getting into city government Tuesday night as he helped draw what may later prove the battle lines for future utility rate cases before the city.

Johnson, acting as soon as Mayor Sue Youngblood asked for nominations for mayor pro tem nominated Commissioner R. A. Armistead, who endorsed him in Saturday's election, and whose hard line views against utility increases Johnson shares.

H. R. Stroube Jr. followed this nomination with one of his own, Wayne Norris, who had voted with Stroube and outgoing Commissioner Jim Lightfoot in passing two hotly disputed utility rate increases last year. Mayor Sue Youngblood, who also fought the rate hikes, then joined Johnson to elect Armistead as mayor pro tem by a 2-1 vote with both Armistead and Norris abstaining.

THE VOTE ON the mayor pro tem spot was the first item of business for the new commission following the swearing in of Johnson and Stroube.

Just prior to the motion to adjourn the meeting, Norris asked Ballenger the significance of a letter included in the agenda packet showing the LoVaca Gathering Company's intentions to raise gas rates again.

Ballenger said the matter was purely for informational purposes, and that he was trying to bring the commission up-to-date on the energy question. He also reminded them of Lone Star Gas' recent request to the Railroad Commission for higher rates.

LIGHTFOOT was present at his final commission meeting, staying through the old business portion of the agenda. This included attending to meeting protocol and passing the final reading of the amended library board ordinance which reduces the library board to an advisory level.

Following this action, Ms. Youngblood presented Lightfoot

Rice election is questioned

By FLETCH HANDLEY JR.
Golden Circle Editor

RICE — Grady McCall, Mrs. Jimmie Cummins and Mrs. Opal Wear were sworn in as members of the Rice City Council last night, but Mayor Ron Cavender said a new election may be called due to a conflict between the election judge and a candidate.

The election protest was made by McCall, after he learned that Mrs. Wear is the sister-in-law of Herman Wear, who was election judge. "Herman has been the election judge here for years and it was only after the election that someone told me he and Mrs. Wear are related," McCall told the Daily Sun.

A deputy sheriff, McCall said he received a complaint about the relationship between the two and checked into the law, discovering that it was illegal. "As a law officer, when I get a complaint, I have to check it out," McCall said.

Cavender told the Daily he, too, was unaware of the relationship between the judge and the candidate. "Mrs. Wear's husband has been deceased for several years and we just didn't know," he said.

Cavender said he has been in contact with attorney Glenn Sodd, "who is working on it." "I have little doubt that the election was illegal, but we'll have to see what the attorney says as far as what to do about it," he said.

McCall said he plans to file a formal protest if a new election is not called in the next 10 days. "I'm interested in what's right and what's legal," he said.

McCall also said the election was illegal because City Marshal Orin Gilbert was present while the ballots were being counted. Gilbert was an incumbent seeking reelection. Efforts to contact Gilbert Wednesday were unsuccessful.

The canvassed ballots showed an extremely tight race with McCall topping all candidates with 63 votes. He was followed by Mrs. Wear with 61, Mrs. Cummins with 59, Robert Baily with 58 and incumbents Kenneth Rawlings with 56 and Richard Perry with 55. Larry Bailey, a member of the Rice School Board, received 4 votes.

In the city marshal's race, Gilbert received 80 votes, while challenger Mark Morgan received 30.

Rice council gets petitions

RICE — A petition signed by 103 citizens was presented to the Rice City Council by Kenneth Rawlins Tuesday, showing support for a pay raise for the city marshal and the appointment of a city judge.

Orin Gilbert the city marshal has requested a $51 per month increase from the present $80 per month he receives, but that request has been turned down twice by the council. Mayor Ron Cavender said he would place the item on the agenda for a future meeting. "I'm sure the council will give it due consideration," he told Rawlins.

The council also heard a statement from Pete Ribble concerning the council's conduct. Ribble asked why the council did not meet during its regularly scheduled time in March. "There was no business to take care of, no agenda prepared and no notice posted," councilman Earnest Reynolds responded.

Ribble also questioned the fact that the council did not hold its regular March meeting a year ago and asked why citizens were not provided seats at a special meeting called on March 30.

"That meeting was very brief (to hire Sodd as an attorney) and we just didn't think to set up the chairs," Cavender said.

Ribble was also disturbed that citizens were asked to go outside "in the cold" while the council went into executive session during that meeting.

"I didn't realize that it was that cold in March, but I apologize if that was the case," Cavender replied. Ribble said the citizens could have been allowed to go into an adjoining room "where it was warm."

In other business, the council voted to join both the Navarro

County Mayors-Cities Association and the Small Town Advisory Service being offered by Navarro College.

An audit of the 1975 budget was presented to the council, showing total cash receipts during the year of $11,250 and total cash disbursements of $12,978. The cash balance as of December 31, 1975 was $12,597 in the general fund and $1,495 in the revenue sharing fund.

The council also heard a report from Rawlins as to why two street lights approved by the council had not been installed. Rawlins said he drew a map for TP&L employees to show where the lights were to go, but was told later that Cavender had postponed the installation of the lights.

"They told me they couldn't follow your map and asked me to show them where to put the lights," Cavender said. "I didn't have time to show them right then, so they left. But I see no reason why we can't get them installed now," he said.

The selection of a bid for a street improvement work was postponed by a vote of the council until the type of materials used by each of the two bidders could be checked.

Mao Tse-tung dismisses first vice premier

TOKYO (AP) — China's Chairman MAO Tse-tung dismissed First Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping from all his party and government posts today and elevated Acting Premier Hua Guo-feng to premier and party first vice chairman.

No. 2 man in the country. The action climaxed months of official campaigning against Teng and followed violent demonstrations in his favor in the heart of Peking two days ago. The promotions catapulted Hua into the role of his apparent to the 82-year-old Mao.

Teng, 72-year-old protégé of the late Premier Chou En-lai and inheritor of his moderate policies, became for the second time in nearly a decade a target to the radical wing of the Chinese Communist party. He was ousted from his jobs as vice chairman of the party and chief of the army general staff. He retained his party membership conditional on future good behavior. The 56-year-old Hua was former minister of security and former party boss in Mao's home province. Besides the premiership, which became vacant with Chou's death from cancer on Jan. 8, Hua was given the post of first vice chairman of the party.

A one-paragraph resolution of the Central Committee, distributed by Hsinhua news agency and monitored here, described the violence in Tien An Men — Gate of Heavenly Peace — Square on Monday as "counterrevolutionary incidents."

It implied that Teng was behind the protest by up to 100,000 people and said that, on Mao's proposal, the party Politburo unanimously agreed to dismiss Teng Hsiao-ping from all posts both inside and outside the party while allowing him to keep his party membership so as to see how he will behave in the future.

The incidents in Peking's Tian An Men square began after tens of thousands of people massed there in tribute to Chou on Sunday, an annual festival of the dead. They left paper flower wreaths at Martyr's Monument and the understanding they would remain until Tuesday.

But by Monday morning the wreaths were gone, and people reacted with an angry rampage. Demonstrators battled militiamen, set three motor vehicles afire and partially burned a building. Scattered protests continued Tuesday, but by today the square was quiet with thousands of militiamen and guards on duty there.

A two-paragraph Central Committee resolution reported the meteoric rise of Hua, a virtual unknown before 1969 whose first successes were in Mao's home county and province of Hunan.

the community, particularly the black community. Luna asked after each service mentioned if the service was useful to the black community and in every instance Wynn replied that it was.

DAVES ASKE D Wynn if there were any sewage facilities or garbage pickup service in the small communities mentioned. Wynn said there were not, to his knowledge. Simmons then took the stand and testified that when he left office in 1971 all of the mentioned towns had gravel roads making every home accessible to a paved road. He also testified that, in almost every case, there was no appreciable building of new houses which were not on gravel roads.

Simmons testified that the commissioners court devised the redistricting plan primarily to equalize the mileage of roads and bridges in each precinct so that county road and bridge money could simply be divided between the four precincts. He said that the county voting rolls were used to estimate the population in the precincts because the 1960 census was nine years old. He testified that there was no attempt after the 1970 census came out to redistrict the county according to the 1970 census figures.

HE SAID THAT the shape of the precincts was determined by maintenance barns built for each precinct in the early 1960s at a cost of about $25,000 each. He said the lines were drawn so that each precinct would have equal population, road and bridge mileage and so that the barn would be near the center of the precincts so that the workers would not spend so much time taking machinery back and forth. Daves had questioned Simmons on the hour-glass shape of Precinct One. Simmons said this was to keep the barn in a central location and he also said Precinct One was in this shape historically.

IN TESTIMONY Wednesday plaintiffs' lawyers said they considered the deviation here 8.64 per cent rather than the 2.14 per cent Simmons testified to the difference in the Precinct One and Precinct Three figures). Daves said that the deviation percentages cited by Simmons should be multiplied by four since there are four precincts. Daves contended, therefore, that the deviation was higher than that allowed by the Supreme Court. The percentages cited are based on the number of registered voters. County Judge Rob Dunn, a defendant in the case, was not present Tuesday. He was in Washington with a group representing the mid-Trinity River counties.

Ennis officials sworn in ENNIS — Newly elected Pct. Three Commissioner Jim Bob Wilson was given the oath of office along with Mayor W.D. Murph and Pct. One Commissioner Raymond Calwell at last night's meeting of the Ennis City Commission.

Following the canvassing of Saturday's ballots by canvassing committee members Billy Colvin, C.C. Chitwood and L.C. Adams, Wilson was declared winner of the pct. three race with 413 votes, compared to 355 for Royce Barton and 175 for Paul Harris.

Incumbents Murph and Calwell ran unopposed and had 707 and 785 votes respectively.

Colvin, the city attorney, issued the oath of office to the three after going out Pct. Three Commissioner Dan Pomykal, who did not seek reelection, was presented a plaque of appreciation for his four years of service to the city.

Despite the time-consuming process of canvassing the ballots, a full agenda followed the ceremony.

ALTHOUGH NO specific action was taken by the commission on the rural fire problem, a letter from Ellis County Judge Joe Grubbs was presented at the meeting. The letter stated that the commissioners court would donate a fire truck with a pump in the event an "Ennis Rural Fire Department" could be formed.

Although the truck would be housed in Ennis, the department itself would have to be entirely made up of volunteers.

City Secretary Mrs. Wynell Rose said the commission agreed to meet in the near future with the Dallas County Fire Marshal to discuss how Dallas County is handling its rural fire problems. Two public hearings on the rural fire problems in Ennis have recently been held. The Ennis Fire Department does not answer rural fire calls unless assistance is requested by another fire department.

The commission voted to allow Pct. Two Commissioner Marvin Walker to keep his position on the City Commission although Walker has recently built a new home and moved into pct. one. Walker does, however maintain an apartment in Pct. Two. The commission had asked for an attorney general's opinion on the situation but was told any decision should be taken by the commission itself.

THERE HAVE been no complaints about the situation from Pct. Two residents, and as long as there are none and Walker maintains his apartment, he will keep his commission seat.

In other business, the commission voted to amend the parks and recreation budget, to give the Girl's Softball League $750 instead of $500 so that lights can be installed in the ball park.
